The Family in Past Perspective

An Interdisciplinary Exploration of Familial Relationships Through Time

Edited by Ellen J. Kendall and Ross Kendall

By applying interdisciplinary perspectives to periods ranging from the Prehistoric to the Modern, this volume informs a wider understanding of the term 'family' and the implications of family dynamics for children and their social networks in the past. Contributors drawn from across the humanities and social sciences present research addressing three primary themes: modes of kinship and familial structure, the convergence and divergence between the idealised image and realities of family life and the provision of care within families. Informs fields ranging from bioarchaeology to women's history.

About the Editors

Ellen J. Kendall is a postdoctoral researcher, with recent roles in the Department of Archaeology at Durham University and the EQUIPOL Research Group at the University of York. She serves as the Treasurer for the Society for the Study of Childhood in the Past (SSCIP).

Ross Kendall is an experienced field archaeologist and human osteologist, with a PhD in Archaeology and Anthropology from Durham University. He is the editorial assistant for the journal Antiquity.
